

The aroma of freshly baked cinnamon rolls wafted through the market, mingling with the earthy scent of exotic spices and the sharp tang of brine from the nearby fishmonger. A lone juggler, his face painted a vibrant blue, kept a frantic rhythm going with mismatched balls, while a jazz trio on a makeshift stage filled the air with a melody that danced between melancholic and hopeful.